4. Metodología

Formal teaching will consist of a weekly one and half hour seminar. The tutor will introduce and outline the topic in general terms and guide the discussion, and will nominate students to prepare presentations on particular topics each week. Students will be required to present once or twice during the year, each presentation lasting a maximum of 15 minutes. The tutor may also set additional group tasks for students at certain times during the module. Again, the value that the students will derive from this module will be enhanced by their degree of input into preparation and discussion for the seminars.

5. Competencias

- To develop students' ability to analyse the development strategies of East Asian countries, to compare them and to draw out generalisations which could have significance for Latin America.
- To enable students to link theoretical and empirical analyses of political and economic material.
